Welcome!

Dear Colleagues and Friends,

Thank you for joining us today for the 5th Annual Postgraduate Medical Education Global Health Day on 'Activism.' We appreciate you taking time to attend and more so to contribute to thoughtful discussion with colleagues across specialties and programs and 'activists' across disciplines and generations.

You each arrive to this day with different understanding on what 'Activism' is, what gives rise to an activist and how you can contribute to advancing equitable global health for all disenfranchised local and global populations.

This day will encourage sharing of ideas on challenging, complex and seemingly unsolvable global and very human world problems. We will learn from our Keynote speaker, Mrs. Setsuko Thurlow that determination is necessary for lifelong, tempered, productive activism. Protest and patience are necessary to make change. Mrs. Thurlow's activism began in 1945, as she witnessed and survived Hiroshima and continues to this day.

The 2018 Global Health Day is planned by a resident committee from across programs and specialties and includes passionate presenters who have established themselves as effective activists. This Global Health Day will showcase how activism contributes to enhanced, equitable and sustainable health for populations across the world. The specific educational objectives for participants are:

- To introduce themes and issues related to global health activism from a variety of perspectives
- To develop a deeper understanding of motivations and processes for effective global health activism
- To encourage participation and engagement in global health advocacy and activism
- To create a forum for peer to peer discussion; to share global health concerns, education, and experience

The University of Toronto and the Toronto community represents extraordinary leadership in global health education, research service and activism across disciplines, locally, nationally and internationally. This Global Health Day program showcases many of these leaders and celebrates the accomplishments of our GHEI graduates.

Thank you for learning with us ...
